

Chammas & Marcheteau strengthens its Employment Law practice with the arrival of Caroline Canavese as partner

Caroline Canavese joins the Employment Law department of the law firm Chammas & Marcheteau as a partner.

Member of the Paris Bar for over 25 years, Caroline advises French and international clients (financial institutions, insurance companies, service companies, industries and senior executives) on both advisory and litigation matters.

After more than 10 years with Anglo-Saxon law firms, including Latham & Watkins and K&L Gates, Caroline co-founded CFM Avocats in 2014, where she headed the employment practice. She also worked for AXA for several years as Director of Labor Relations, France and Europe, giving her a global vision of the company and an understanding of its major labor issues. Her extensive experience of working with social partners has led to the publication of a book entitled "Piloter les relations sociales", as well as appearances on television programs.

Caroline, accompanied by her counsel Sarah Joomun, will strengthen our employment law practice, which will now consist of two partners and four associates.

Caroline Canavese comments: "I'm very excited to be joining the dynamic and renowned team at Chammas & Marcheteau. I'm looking forward to helping strengthen the employment practice and to contributing my experience to the firm's growth ambitions".

Denis Marcheteau, co-founding partner, comments: "Caroline's arrival responds to a growing demand from our clients and partners in the field of employment law, particularly on an international scale. In addition to her long experience and excellent reputation, we know that Caroline shares our human values. We look forward to her arrival, as well as that of Sarah Joomun".
